The American Men's Studies Association (AMSA) is an organization of men and women dedicated to teaching, research and clinical practice in the field of men's studies. Our goal as an association is to provide a forum for teachers, researchers and therapists to exchange information and gain support for their work with men.

Mission Statement

The American Men's Studies Association conceives men's studies to be concerned with the analyses of male experiences as social-historical-cultural constructions.

The American Men's Studies Association is committed to serve as a multidisciplinary forum of men and women irrespective of class background, ethnic origin, religious background, sexual orientation, or physical abilities, whose purpose is to promote critical discussion of issues involving men and masculinities, and to disseminate knowledge about men's lives to a broad audience.

The American Men's Studies Association is dedicated to supporting and encouraging scholars, teachers, and practitioners at all academic, educational and professional levels.

The Association invites into membership scholars, researchers, teachers, and practitioners who share its perspective and who subscribe to high standards of scholarship in research, teaching and practice.

The Association also intends to serve a mentoring function for young scholars in the field.

The major objectives of the American Men's Studies Association are to encourage the refinement of the parameters of men's studies, to generate theory, and to develop methodologies of the study of masculinities from an ethical perspective which eschews oppression in all forms (namely sexism, racism, homophobia, anti-Semitism, classism, et al.)

Given the pluralistic nature of men's studies, it is the American Men's Studies Association's intention to recognize and respect the many voices emerging from among those working with and/or studying men and masculinity. We are committed to provide a forum of open and inclusive dialog which involves a spirit of mutual respect for our common humanity.

The American Men's Studies Association values collegial relationships characterized by the kind of generativity and support which are mutually empowering, guiding, and affirming.

Membership runs from April through March. Annual Dues: $50 ($60 outside US) Students $35.
